

MACKWORTH, Sir HUMPHREY (1657-1727), industrialist and parliamentarian

Name: Humphrey Mackworth
Date of birth: 1657
Date of death: 1727
Spouse: Mary Mackworth (née Evans)
Child: Herbert Mackworth
Parent: Anne Mackworth
Parent: Thomas Mackworth
Gender: Male
Occupation: industrialist and parliamentarian
Area of activity: Business and Industry; Politics, Government and Political Movements
Author: David Williams

Born in January 1657, the son of Thomas and Anne Mackworth, of Betton Grange, Shropshire. (His grandfather and namesake was prominent both as a soldier and as a politician on the Puritan side in the Civil War). Mackworth matriculated from Magdalen College, Oxford, 11 December 1674, entered the Middle Temple on 10 June 1675, was called to the Bar in 1682, and was knighted by Charles II on 15 January 1683.

In 1686 (settlement dated 16 June) he married Mary, daughter of Sir Herbert Evans of Gnoll, Neath, Glamorganshire, who became her father's sole heiress on the death of her sisters. (She herself died before July 1696). On his marriage, Mackworth settled at Neath. His wife's grandfather, David Evans, as well as her father, had obtained leases which virtually gave them a monopoly in the working of coal in this area. These were renewed for Mackworth, who actively developed coalmining on his wife's estates. Copper smelting had been carried on at Neath in the late 16th century, and may have been continued spasmodically in the 17th century. Local coal had been used from the start to smelt copper there and in Cornwall, and on this account Mackworth became interested in copper smelting. He may have started smelting at Neath as early as 1695. In 1698 he acquired large interests in Cardiganshire. Rich mineral deposits had been found in 1690 on the Gogerddan estates, and a company had been formed by Sir Carbery Pryse of Gogerddan) to develop them. This became increasingly important in 1693 when the monopoly of the Society of Mines Royal was terminated. After Sir Carbery Pryse's death in 1694 Mackworth, in 1698, acquired his interests for £16,440, and reorganised the enterprise as the Company of Mine Adventurers, which obtained its charter in 1704. Rapid development in smelting then took place at Neath, which was centrally situated between Cardigan and Cornwall, the two sources of mineral supply. Mackworth was, however, engaged in bitter disputes with neighbouring coal proprietors, notably Sir Edward Mansel of Briton Ferry and his Company of Mine Adventurers, which had been financed by very dubious means, became bankrupt in 1709. This matter was investigated in 1710 by a committee of the House of Commons, which declared Mackworth 'guilty of many notorious and scandalous frauds,' but he was saved by the fall of the Whig administration in that year. In 1713 he formed the Company of Mineral Manufacturers, but this ceased operations in 1719, although smelting continued at Neath until his death. In 1715 he acquired various manors at Neath.

Mackworth sat in parliament as member for Cardiganshire in 1701, and from 1702 to 1705. He then abandoned Cardiganshire for Oxford University, but was defeated, and sat for Totnes from 1705 to 1707. He wished to be returned for Cardiganshire in 1708, but Lewis Pryse of Gogerddan was himself a candidate. Mackworth therefore contested Cardigan boroughs at a by-election in February 1710, but the financial scandal was then at its height, and he was defeated. He was once more returned for the shire in October 1710, and sat until 1713. He was an active member and served on an unusually large number of committees. His political views were typical of the Tory High Church party, and, despite his Puritan ancestry, he was a strong supporter of the Occasional Conformity Act.

He was one of the four laymen who assisted Dr. Thomas Bray to form the S.P.C.K. on 8 March 1699. In 1706 his company made provision for the payment of £20 a year towards a Charity school at the Esgair Hir mine in Cardiganshire, and £30 a year to a minister at the same place, as well as £20 a year towards a Charity school at Neath. On 17 September 1719, in view of the difficulty of getting a schoolmaster at Neath, he suggested to the S.P.C.K. the use of an 'itinerant master' to start new schools and train ushers in them. He wrote a number of religious works. His piety and benevolence are in strange contrast to the dubious nature of his financial transactions. He died on 25 August 1727.

His eldest son

HERBERT MACKWORTH (1687 - 1765), M.P.

succeeded to his estates, and represented Cardiff in parliament as the protégé of the Cardiff castle interest from 1739 to his death in 1765.

He, again, was succeeded by his son

Sir HERBERT MACKWORTH (1737 - 1791), M.P.

He also represented Cardiff from 1765 to 1790, father and son thus having represented the same constituency for fifty-one years. But in 1790 he was forced to retire when the heir to earl Bute came of age and required the seat. Herbert Mackworth was created a baronet in 1776. His son, Sir ROBERT HUMPHREY MACKWORTH (1764 - 1794) died without issue.

Author

Emeritus Professor David Williams, (1900 - 1978)

Sources

A Chapter in English Church History; S.P.C.K. Minutes and [Abstracts of] Correspondence, 1698-1704 (London 1888)

Oxford Dictionary of National Biography (has a list of Sir Humphrey Mackworth's publications)

W. R. Williams, The parliamentary history of the principality of Wales, from the earliest times to the present day, 1541-1895(Brecknock 1895)

D. Rhys Phillips, The History of the Vale of Neath (Swansea 1925)

D. J. Davies, The Economic History of South Wales prior to 1800 (1933)

Mary Ransome, 'Parl. career of Sir Humphrey Mackworth' in University of Birmingham Historical Journal, 1948, 232-54

Further Reading

Wikipedia Article: Humphrey Mackworth

Wikipedia Article: Herbert Mackworth

Wikipedia Article: Sir Herbert Mackworth, 1st Baronet

Works

Syr Humphrey Mackworth, The mine-adventure; or, An expedient : first, for composing all differences between the partners of the mines late of Sir Carbery Pryse. Secondly, for establishing a new method for the management thereof, and thereby... settling an equal and fair constitution for every person concerned. Thirdly, for granting several charities out of the same to the poor of every county in England and Wales,... Fourthly, for enabling the partners to employ a much greater stock therein, and consequently... to advance the gain and profits thereof. Fifthly, for discharging all debts, duties, and demands chargeable upon said mines,... And, sixthly, for raising a large stock of 20000 l.... for the working and carrying on the said mineral works,... (London 1698)

Syr Humphrey Mackworth, A Settlement of the mines, late of Sir Carbery Pryse whereby the old lease thereof is renewed and a better constitution established in order to raise a stock of twenty thousand pounds for the effectual carrying on the said mineral works (London 1698)

Syr Humphrey Mackworth, The answer of Sir Humphrey Mackworth to the several particulars of the complaint upon the petition of several creditors and proprietors of principal-money, annuities, and shares of the Company of Mine-Adventurers (London? 1709?)

Additional Links

VIAF: 71740672

Wikidata: Q635159

Published date: 1959

Article Copyright: <http://rightsstatements.org/page/InC-RUU/1.0/>

PDF Print Cite

The Dictionary of Welsh Biography is provided by The National Library of Wales and the University of Wales Centre for Advanced Welsh and Celtic Studies. It is free to use and does not receive grant support. A donation would help us maintain and improve the site so that we can continue to acknowledge Welsh men and women who have made notable contributions to life in Wales and beyond.

Find out more on our sponsorship page.

APA Citation

Williams, D., (1959). MACKWORTH, Sir HUMPHREY (1657-1727), industrialist and parliamentarian. Dictionary of Welsh Biography. Retrieved 11 Nov 2024, from <https://biography.wales/article/s-MACK-HUM-1657>

Copy to Clipboard

Privacy & Cookies
Copyright
The Project
Help
Contact

LGC
NLW

LLYFRGEL
THE NATION

Ysgrifeddiwr
Llywodraeth Cymru
Sponsored by
Welsh Government